Statement from Congressman Brad Carson
Remembering September 11th

Washington, D.C. --

Washington, D.C. – Second District Congressman Brad Carson released the following statement on the one year remembrance of September 11th:

“It is hard to believe that only a year ago today, the United States suffered one of the most horrific acts imaginable. We witnessed the great evil man is capable of, but more importantly, our nation experienced the tremendous strength each of us possess.

“On that fateful day, we learned the true meaning of a hero. Whether it be the firefighters and police officers that rushed into the World Trade Center and Pentagon to rescue victims, the passengers on Flight 93 who prevented additional tragedy, or a parent who could comfort us: Americans rose to the challenge.

“The terrorists could strike our tallest buildings, but they could not destroy the foundation of our country. It is an amazing experience to travel across Eastern Oklahoma and see the passion for the values and freedoms we cherish. In every neighborhood, flags are flown as a testament to the love of our country. From the events one year ago, our nation is the strongest it has ever been because of our faith and resolve.

“My wife, Julie, and I join with every American in honoring the memories of the innocent lives lost. We embrace the values and liberties that make our nation great, and we are thankful for the men and women who put their lives at risk to protect our families.

“May God Bless America.”
